

'Fertile Solitude' Flourishes at the Boston Center for the Arts

November 1, 2016 | Harvard Crimson

"Fertile Solitude" at the Boston Center for the Arts creates an immersive experience complete with art that appeals to every sense. The visitor's experience can encompass everything from smelling rain and cigarette ashes to touching withered 1950s magazines. These varied interpretations of solitude seek to redefine what it means to be alone." Read more...
